The ACVO Conference is the largest veterinary ophthalmology educational meeting in the world. Researchers and clinical practitioners from over 30 countries convene to share information, while earning on average 20-24 hours of RACE approved 'live' CE credit (approval pending). The conference offers over 130 abstract presentations in both presentation and poster formats, a keynote speaker, a residents' workshop and manuscript competition, and an 8-hour general practitioner's course (available separately). Typically 650-750 veterinarians and specialists, additionally 150 technicians, 100 vendors, and 50 guests attend annually. The program is laced with opportunities to network including a meeting for those interested in learning about residencies and sub-specialty areas of interest. Students, interns, and residents are offered special rates. We welcome anyone interested in veterinary ophthalmology to attend either the full conference or the General Practitioner's course alone.
